Not illustrated. 1819 edition. Excerpt: ...Note: great confusion prevails regarding this and the next word T513, and the original has increased it by adding, a third word ER misquoting the Dburini for it, in which the reading is correctly TFLY; the authorities differ considerably, and there is reason to presume that not one of them is uniformly accurate in the interpretations of these two words; the i following are the passages: The first inference to be drawn from these readings is that besides the meanings peculiar to Ti! it has those of authorities agreeing in making it so except the 5abda Rctltfvali: for the interpretations; the Mezlilziis wrong in t bl adjustment the difficulty of separating tlein.indeed seems to have been long aimpraeica e _.-, -llowing convenient rule, which rendflfl 111% insurmountable, and to have given rise 10 tlw 5 distinction a matter of perfect inditierence: i. omission, and a final nasal mark or its omission, are always optional, there being no dilference between them. J i Nbtwithstanding the latitittle which this doctrine permits, the adjustment of theseletters, aaid of landiespeeially, has occasioned me infinite trouble: I may there observe that the classification of words beginning with a ii or v which I have adopted, rests chiefly on the authority of the commentators on Anmrtn, and the chapter of the Viiva on the subject, extepded by anal_ogy_ to those cases towhich theirlspeeiiications do not apply. A also have been visited with a leni it L l n, mlht have been expected, and they miight en s irt pages of the work, I have also inserted many words, which occurred incirixentiallyiin the course D of such miscellaneous reading as my very...
