

REFLECTIONS ON ORGANIZATION PROCESSES (The Thought Train Series: Station9)

This e-book is a collection of several articles pertaining to the domain of organization behavior. You will encounter an interesting range of thoughts that will widen your perspectives on the nature of organization processes. The chapters presented can be read in any order as desired. First, the concept of calculating the real age of an organization is proposed after considering process maturities which can reflectively be used for process improvement, analyzing organization and sector trends, and estimating Thanatos Syndrome within organizations. A formula is proposed to size the real age to three digits. Next, the factors involved for an organization to successfully climb out of the valley of death is considered. Later a Software Driven Circular Model is proposed as an alternative to the classic hierarchy model. And steps to implement the family model within organizations is outlined after proposing a LinkedIn Meta-Networking theory. The total number of possible damp courses within an organization is calculated and a means to visualize organization communication as communication circuits is provided using the concept of pipes, filters, and buffers. Finally a method to estimate the expected annual usage of leadership web-based lessons for a fixed population of managers within an organization is proposed. Professionals passionate about organization processes will find this e-book enjoyable, engaging, and enlightening. You will begin to appreciate the fresh perspectives put forth by the author.---The Thought Train Series presents a series of thoughts visualized as a train that keeps traveling across different territories of the human mind. It is a journey from nowhere to nowhere. It stops though at various stations represented by numbers 1, 2, 3, and so on. Each of these stations will delight you with unique and interesting learning experiences. The Thought Train

Series would eventually give birth to two more series: The Mind Map Series and Fleeting Moments. Come and take a seat in this Thought Train. There is ample space for everyone.
