

Critical and Miscellaneous Essays, Collected and Republished, Vol. 4 of 4 (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Critical and Miscellaneous Essays, Collected and Republished, Vol. 4 of 4 The Acts of the Christian Apostles, on which, as we may say, the world has, now for eighteen centuries, had its foundation, are written in so small a compass, that they can be read in one little hour. The Acts of the French Philosophes, the importance of which is already fast exhausting itself, lie recorded in whole acres of typography, and would furnish reading for a lifetime. Nor is the stock, as we see, yet anywise complete, or within computable distance of completion. Here are four quite new Octavos, recording the labours, voyages, victories, amours and indigestions of the Apostle Denis: it is but a year or two since a new contribution on Voltaire came before us; since Jean Jacques had a new Life written for him; and then of those Fauilles de Grimm, what incalculable masses may yet lie dormant in the Petersburg Library, waiting only to awakened and let slip! - Reading for a lifetime? Thomas Parr might begin reading in long-clothes, and stop in his last hundred and fiftieth year without having ended.
